

SENATOR HOLT

information to answer a query, never thinks of calling him at his house — he rings him up first at his office, and nine times out of ten gets him there.

Surrounded by his pet police dogs, who go with him everywhere, Holt toils far into the night, digging up the sort of facts that the New Deal would much prefer remain unexhumed.

The boy wonder was so young when elected to the Senate that under the Constitution he was not eligible. The New Dealers anxious to secure that extra senatorial Democratic vote, stretched the Constitution to the breaking point, and permitted Holt to wait for six months when he attained to the constitutional age, and took the oath of office.

Many and oft were the times thereafter when Joe Robinson and the New Deal leadership wished that they had rejected the boy wonder when he first showed up, for in a short time he had become a pain in the neck to the Democratic organization.

He broke with the New Deal over his exposure of WPA racketeering in West Virginia, and from that point went on to combat a lot of New Deal tomfoolery.

Watch Holt. He will be coming back to the Senate some day, and a mighty good thing.

AT STORER COLLEGE

One of the highlights of the week at Storer college was the recital given by Miss Marie Jo Brown of Boston. In her characteristic impersonation she is unusually talented.

Coach Johnson is getting his high power women's basketball team into gear. He has the largest squad out in all the years of his coaching, and looks forward to a very busy season. His Golden Zephyrs were champions of the MAAA last year. He has lost three of the championship group of one year ago, but has a considerable amount of new talent, which is gearing into his system.

TIED ALL THE TIME, COULD NOT SLEEP

Galax, Va. — "My entire constitution was very much run-down, besides other troubles I was completely tired out all the time, and was so nervous I could not sleep at night. Everything I ate seemed to upset me and I suffered terribly in different ways, but after taking two bottles each of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and Golden Medical Discovery, alternately, I was feeling greatly improved. I cannot say too much for what it has meant to me." — Mrs. H. H. Hampton. Dealers everywhere.
